The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Makikawa et al.

Makikawa et al disclose an exercise assembly comprising a platform (5a) a base (6), a support assembly (23, 28, 30, 31) and wherein said platform and said support are structured to direct the platform through a plurality of paths.

The control means, sensors, processors and display means are disclosed and inherent in the device of Maikawa et al as broadly claimed not the display means 1 and schematic of fig 2.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoyle et al.

Hoyle et al discloses a device comprising a platform (at 70) a base (10) and a support assembly (12) said platform and said support assembly cooperatively structured to direct the platform through a plurality of paths of movement.

Application/Control Number: 09/934,319

Art Unit: 3764

Hoyle et al however does not disclose his device wherein the support structure is substantially semi-circular as claim.

Hoyle however does disclose his device wherein his support member does have opposite free ends connected indirectly to said platform.

The examiner however notes that to manufacture the support member 12 of

Hoyle of a semi-circular shape would have been one of several shapes such as a V or a

U and that so long as the support member includes two free ends the functionality of the support member would be the same.

Applicant have presented no reasoning why the particular configuration of a semi-circular support member is significant or is anything more than one of numerous configurations obvious for the purpose of providing support member having two free ends to connect to a platform.

Claims 1, 10, and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hotas.

Hotas discloses a device comprising a platform, a base, a support assembly (19) configured to move through a plurality of paths and weights secured to and end of an arm adjacent an outer end.

Claim3 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hoyle et al in view of McIntyre.

Hoyle discloses the device of claim 3 substantially as claimed absent the feature of the pivot axis/or the free ends of the support member coinciding with the an axis which extends transversely through ax axis of rotation of an ankle joint.

McIntyre however, teaches provide a support member having an axis as claimed.

Given the above teaching of McIntyre the examiner notes that to configure the support member of Hoyle et al wherein the pivot axis of the device extends transverse through the axle of a user is known and found to be useful in the art of manufacturing ankle exercise devices.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Note the overall device of Escher.
